

“Plan Now: Life after High School”

Special show airs on Tri-Valley Community TV

Not sure what your son or daughter’s options are after high school graduation or how soon they should start planning? Don’t know where to start with the college application process? “Plan Now: Life after High School” is a 30 minute program produced by Tri-Valley Community TV (TVCTV). This program provides information about the different options available to students after high school graduation and how to successfully prepare for them.

High school and college counselors from the Tri-Valley help prepare parents and students by giving answers to questions such as: What’s the difference between applying to a private, community or state university? What makes a good fit? What vocational options are available? What classes do students need to take in high school? When do they need to start the planning process?

Discussing these and other topics on “Plan Now: Life after High School” are: Jennifer Roush, Counselor, Foothill High School in Pleasanton; Kathy Schults, Career Education Specialist, Granada High School in Livermore; Dr. Cheryll LeMay, Counselor, Diablo Valley Community College; Barbara Morrissey, Counselor/Instructor, Las Positas College; and Deanna Gonzales, Director of Admissions and Outreach, San Jose State University.

"Whether they are looking for a job or applying for college, students face a high level of competition," says Executive Director of TVCTV Melissa Tench-Stevens. "We hope this program developed and produced by TVCTV will give students an edge for success with their future."
